DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-16 are currently pending.

It is noted that claims 10-13 are in improper "use" format. For the purposes of the restriction requirement, these claims are addressed as "method of use" claims.

Election/Restrictions

Restriction is required under 35 U.S.C. 121 and 372.

This application contains the following inventions or groups of inventions which are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

In accordance with 37 CFR 1.499, applicant is required, in response to this action, to elect a single invention to which the claims must be restricted.

- I. Claims 1-4, drawn to method to identify a ligand site obeying a two-state or more complex binding behavior.
- II. Claims 5-9,15, drawn to method to determine quantitatively the dissociation rate constant for a transient complex of a ligand with the target molecule.
- III. Claims 10,13,14,16 drawn to method to determine amino acid residues with detectable NMR relaxation dispersion.
- IV. Claims 11,13,14,16 drawn to method to identify two or more ligands that can be linked together.

V. Claims 12-14,16 drawn to method to study high-affinity protein-protein interactions.

The inventions listed as Groups do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, they lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons:

Groups II-V refer to patentably distinct methods which utilize result of method of Group I, the latter being used to determine a ligand site with two-state behavior. A ligand site with two-state behavior is a common descriptor of a ligand site and it can be identified by a variety of methods known in art. See, for example NMR study of Volkman et al. (Science 23 March 2001:Vol. 291. no. 5512, pp. 2429 – 2433). Thus Identifying ligand site with two-state behavior is not a “special technical feature”.

The methods of Group I-V are distinct as they have a materially different design, mode of operation, function, or effect.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the response to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
